Excerpt: . . . fond visions were dissipated like a pricked bubble. And I believe it was my over-cautiousness in walking a road without boots that proved my undoing. IV--RECAPTURED--I WAS SENTENCED TO SOLITARY CONFINEMENT A policeman challenged me and I replied--I hadn't much German--Deutsch. All, I think, would have gone well had he not glanced at my feet. Then he promptly switched on an electric lamp, worn at his breast, and covered me with a revolver. The game was up; my race was run! I had to admit that I was an Englisher. To add to my mortification, I learned from the officer that I was only five or six kilometres from the Dutch frontier. Well, to give the German his due, that policeman played the good Samaritan. He knocked up a cottager and got me some coffee and bread--and never did anything taste so sweet....
