Not illustrated. 1897 Excerpt: . . . him her novel, and when it reached him, a few days later, he opened it with considerable eagerness. The perusal disappointed him somewhat, and the story seemed to him unworthy of the pen that had written Two and a Passion. But he replied, as he was bound to do, with a letter of grateful appreciation, and endeavored, moreover, to persuade himself that he liked it better than he did. The lady, on her side, wrote a cordial little note, thanking him for the amended proof-sheets--I had no idea I was so clever or so charming. She said she should be pleased to see him if he could ever spare the time to look in; she could give him a cup of real English tea, and she was very truly his--Eva Deane-Pitt. CHAPTER XV. She was living in the Avenue Wagram--she had taken a small furnished flat there for a few months--and when he encountered her on the boulevards, about a week afterwards, Kent was puzzled to discover a reason why he had not availed himself of her invitation. He called a day or two later, and found her cynical but stimulating. In recalling the visit, it appeared to him that she was more entertaining in conversation than in print, which suggested that her good things were not as good as they sounded, but while she talked he was amused. He left the flat with the consciousness of having spent a very agreeable half-hour, and was sorry...
