Excerpt: . . . and a model to every other, Zech. vii. 9, Sec. Ex. xxii. 2 1. Job. xxxi. 21. God cannot suffer an eternal blemish in his work; and therefore light with goodness, must triumph over infernal darkness. R. Make no friendship with a quick angry 24 man, and with a furious resentive man, thou shalt not often go even for commerci; lest thou 25 learn from example his rash hazardous ways, and get, in time, a fatal snare to thy soul. Friendship. A necessary engagement to the comfort os life, requires both delicacy of choice and future behaviour. Those who are apt to take offence, must be jealous, proud, domineering. Exchange of sentiments and hearts prove more and more endearing. Be not thou one of them that hastily strike 26 hands of agreement for life, or of them that are similarly rash sureties for debts. Engagements...
