Not illustrated. 1901 Excerpt: . they didn t realize that a simple musician stood before them. One man was heard to remark audibly that That cove had never ought to gone in the mining business. All this time I was in the wings being joshed on all sides and getting ready to present a normal appearance once more. The buzzing outside continued, with an occasional hurrah, and when the man who was managing the programme went out to make the next announcement they would not allow him to speak, but called for more music from the fellow with the beard. Finally, when he could get a word in edgewise, he told them how they had been hoaxed and that they had been listening to the musical director of the Columbia Theater, San Francisco, who was in town on business and had taken this mode of giving himself a little pleasure. Then the applause, mixed with laughter, broke out again louder than ever, and I had to go out and bow. After the show I thought I should never get away alive, so great was the joshing I received. The very next day I received an offer of a permanent engagement to play in the orchestra there at a salary of $25 a night, for as many nights as I wantd. And that was my first public appearance as a musician in the Klondike, and I think every one called it a success. Any way, I shall never forget the...
