Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Machinery and Its Benefits, to Labor in the Crude Iron, and Steel Industries Civilization may well be measured by the progress made in mechanical processes. From the simple and crude tools of earlier ages to the colossal machines and complex implements of today there is observed an ascending series of greater mechanical production which registers itself in a greater number of useful things which go to satisfy our ever increasing wants. Coupled with and as a part of this long range of changes in machine processes are seen changes in the type and kind of human effort required to operate the new machinery. The man with the flail is replaced by the man of the threshing machine. The green-groomed cabby and the hostler give way to the trim chauffeur and the auto machinist. The dull and stupid driver of the horse-car has long since found the electric motorman his replacer. Even the strong and robust Slav, with pick and shovel witnesses at the ditch the mechanical digger which by the guidance of the skillful engineer constructs more trench in a day than fifty laborers could accomplish in a week. Everywhere, on all sides, we see this advent of new machinery; and everywhere, on all sides, we see this machinery making different demands upon labor effort. What, then, have been the effects of this industrial evolution upon man? Does the newer kind of work call for a higher or a lower type of employee as measured by physical and mental requirements? For instance, does that gigantic charging machine, which carries tons of iron and scrap into the open hearth furnace demand higher or lower standards of...
