Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Spinners Book of Fiction And in some inscrutable way Sister Dominica during that long conversation, while Mrs. Grace and her other daughters dispensed egg-hog in the parlor it was New Year's Day - had made the young girl a part of her very self, until Teresa indulged the fancy that without and within she was a replica of that Concha Arguello of California's Springtime; won her heart so completely that she would have followed her not only into the comfortable and in comparably situated convent of the saint of Siena, but barefooted into that wilderness of Soledad where the Indians still prayed for their lost Beata. It was just eight months tonight since she had taken her first vows, and she had been honestly aware that there was no very clear line of demarcation in her fervent young mind between her love of Sister Dominica and her love of God. Tonight, almost prostrate before the coffin of the dead nun, she knew that so far at least all the real passion...
